2,000 Mexican Troops Will Be Permitted to Cross Texas Territory

Governor Davison Reconsiders Refusal, at Suggestion of Secretary Hughes.

MARCH OF NINETEEN MILES

Federal Government Gives Assurance of Adequate Protection of Lives and Property of Texans Against Rebels Who Might Seek to Retaliate.

By United Press
AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 19.—Acting Governor T. W. Davison today revised his decision not to permit Mexican federal troops to cross Texas territory and announced that 2,000 Mexicans would be permitted to cross from the New Mexico state line to El Paso, Tex., a distance of 19 miles. His announcement followed receipt of a telegram from Secretary of State Hughes in which the latter said the government would appreciate it if the Texas executive would grant permission for the troops to enter Mexico via El Paso because of the urgency of the situation.

Secretary Hughes modified his earlier request that the troops be allowed to proceed as far as Laredo. The national government, said Hughes in his telegram, will see to it that proper safeguards are taken to protect lives and property of Texans.

PROHIBITION IS BITTERLY ASSAILED BY GEN. SHERWOOD

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Prohibition has failed to show one moral or economic benefit to society, to business or to the federal treasury, General James Sherwood of Ohio told the House today in one of the bitterest attacks on the dry law ever heard in Congress.

General Sherwood, 48, the 30th year, told the House that the dry law had not been a financial success, was not popular with the public and was not now in the house.

After four years of prohibition, Sherwood said, "not one promise of the alluring program of the Anti-Saloon League for reforming the Nation has been kept."

"Crime has increased 40 per cent, divorces in cities have increased 35 per cent and murders have increased 40 per cent. And worse than all these calamities is the fearful record of the dope dens, now numbering nearly 1,000,000," Sherwood said.

A Girl Sues Mother And Physician for Million Damages

By United Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Following her escape from a sanitarium Mrs. French W. French, beautiful young wife of a Newark broker, has started suit against her mother, Mrs. Helen Darling, a physician and insurance company official, asking $1,000,000 for alleged conspiracy to keep her confined. Mrs. French who is 23 years old, was separated from her husband a year ago. Twice during the past year, she alleges, she was taken to a sanitarium and compelled to submit to morphine injections. After one injection given against her will at her home she awoke to find herself in a Trenton sanitarium.

Mrs. French charges she was confined at the Glenwood Sanitarium at Trenton in care of Dr. Henry J. Colton and that she was not permitted to use the telephone or to send or receive letters.

"Last Tuesday I rolled the sheet from my bed into a rope, tied it to balcony rail and started to slip down. The knot gave way and I fell half way to the ground. I wasn't hurt so I picked myself up and ran."

Mrs. French went to the home of a nurse who is now living. Her address is kept secret.

The mother, Mrs. Darling, when seen at her home said her daughter's trouble was liquor. "You know the sort of liquor we are getting nowadays."

KNICKERS FOR WOMEN WIN IN TOWN ELECTION
SPENCER, W. Va., Jan. 19.—The little town of Beatty, near here, has affirmed by popular vote, though by the slim majority of one, that looks with favor on women dressed in knickerbockers.

Last May Major Cottle secured passage of an ordinance, by the town council, forbidding women and girls to wear knickers. The state's attorney said he wasn't sure, but thought that to be constitutional the law should apply to both sexes.

The other day came another mayoralty election. Kalcker was the issue. T. W. Latimer, who favored the rights of women to dress as they please, got 78 votes to Cottle's 77. He announced he will not enforce the anti-knicker law.

Greater Gun Power, Increased Naval Patrol, Larger Land Force Necessary for Panama Canal

Definite Measures Suggested After Crushing Defeat by "Enemy."

By United Press

WITH THE ATLANTIC FLEET OFF THE PANAMA CANAL, Jan. 19.—Three definite remedial measures for weaknesses in the land defenses of the Panama Canal, exposed by a crushing "enemy" victory after the first week's mimic war maneuvers, were proposed by high military authorities today. The paper war of 1924, in which spectators witnessed all the grandeur of movement and dash of real naval warfare and saw the "shattered" defending fleet huddled in Cristobal harbor, while the "enemy" rules the Caribbean, proved that the defenses of the canal are inadequate to protect an emerging fleet from the guns of the numerical inferior hostile naval fleet.

Greater naval patrol strength to prevent landing parties such as that which on the morning of the 17th captured Fort Randolph at Coco Solo.

The gun power of Forts Randolph and Sherman is to be increased to enable the stations to hold off an enemy fleet while the American fleet debouches from the canal.

Infantry and field artillery units should be increased for the purpose of defense against landing parties.

This would include better housing, storage and transportation facilities to accommodate reinforcements which could be rushed to the canal zone in time of war.

It is pointed out that emplacement of the big guns found necessary would take a year under emergency order and five years under the War Department project, which went to Congress in 1920, providing for expenditures of $13,000,000.

Flight to Pole Safer Than Auto Ride, Denby Says

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—In making the flight to the North Pole the Shapovalov would be safer than an automobile on a road. Secretary Denby said before the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Denby said the object was first to discover and claim for America a vast unexplored continent believed to be identical to the Arctic circle.

Second to survey and map Alaska from the air; third, to hang up a new record for America by making an around-the-world flight in a dirigible.

The flight will be this year because next year will be "too late," he said.

TIME FOR VETERANS TO "SIGN UP."

There ought to be no necessity to urge upon men who served with the armed forces of the United States in the World War the advantages of taking membership in an organization of veterans. Without such membership the associations formed during that service cannot be kept alive to the extent it is in every way desirable should be done, nor can the interests of the veterans be promoted in as many directions or with the strength and force that at times may be necessary.

The farther we become removed in point of time from the stirring days when the country was vociferous in its acclaim of the "fine things" the boys were doing to sustain our national traditions and honor, the more will the veterans themselves discover that the enthusiasm of the populace is a fading thing. Already has it been proven to the everlasting discredit of the public that the freely tendered promises of "nothing too good for the boys when they come back," have been forgotten, and these same boys have been left to shift for themselves and, not infrequently, have they actually been discriminated against.

If all of the five million of men who were called into service in 1917-1918 were members of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars or similar organizations, and were active in that membership, a very decided change in public sentiment on matters pertaining to the interests of ex-soldiers would be found to have taken place. These would be manifested in all quarters to pay some attention to their organizations and greater willingness, even eagerness, to show respect that is due to those who offered their all at a critical hour in our nation's history.

Until the Grand Army of the Republic had enrolled the larger part of the veterans of the Civil War it suffered much the same experience as the younger veteran organizations are now undergoing. There was indifference and even pronounced opposition and open disrespect until the G. A. R. had acquired such proportions and influence that it had to be reckoned with. When the present day organizations attain proportionate strength they, too, will find that the lateness, not to say indifference, of the public, will have given way to a wholly different attitude.

It is within the power of the veterans themselves to bring about such a change. The means by which it can be done is to swell the membership of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars until they include on their rosters the name of practically every man who is eligible.

Just now the Legion is entering upon a membership campaign. All soldiers, sailors and marines who served at home or abroad and hold an honorable discharge are entitled to become legionnaires. To the degree that they are concerned about healing the interests of veterans promoted and the spirit of Americanism fostered, they ought to be glad of the opportunity this campaign presents to "sign up," not for a year, but for "the war" against all the things to which the Legion at an up-standing American organization is opposed.

CAN'T STAMPEDE THE FARMERS.

The farmers of the nation are not being stampeded or blindly led into advocacy and support of a wild program of government ownership and paternalism as has been feared or predicted. True, an element of not inconsiderable proportions has been deluded into following the leadership of some visionary economists, but the great body of tillers of the soil, always able to think out questions for themselves and weigh carefully the arguments of others, are keeping their feet firmly on the ground with respect to the sound, old-fashioned doctrines and policies which have made our nation great and its form of government the true expression of the will of the people. The attitude of this group has been expressed in unequivocal terms by the resolutions adopted at the recent joint convention of farmers and manufacturers held in Chicago. These resolutions cover the following points:

"We oppose government fixing of prices of agricultural or other commodities."

"We commend the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Commerce for the work they are doing in the foreign marketing field."

"In the development of the power at Muscle Shoals, the production of fertilizer should be the primary but not the sole object."

"We favor a movement to en-their employees less frequently than those which are non-diversifiers. In the first place the well-known house gets the pick of those seeking employment. Ambitious young men and young women are attracted to the business which shows enterprise. They feel und dignified that employers with these are more likely to be permanent. When their friends inquire they prefer to say they are working for a concern which everybody knows. And once employed they are more careful to hold their positions. There is no disgrace in having a bright boy. But the stigma of discharge from one of known stability and enterprise is a heavy handicap.

The advertised scope and the advertised factory has another great advantage. Many are busier more months of the year. Employees are not held in dual seasons because dull seasons are few, or none. Steady employment attracts the best class of workers.

So you see advertising may be pro-mitable in more ways than in merely increasing sales.

Surplus Churches Foster
Rural Depression

One vital cause of the present rural depression is the alarming surplus of unproductive country churches, says Dr. Edmund deB. Brunner of the Institute of Social and Religious Research, New York.

Churchmen are working an injustice upon the land worker of the United States, according to Dr. Brunner, who, as director of the town and country studies of that organization, recently completed a survey of the rural church situation in the United States during which data were collected in 1,000 counties and more intensive studies made in 179. Home mission societies of the various denominations are among the worst offenders against the prosperity of the rural population by aiding the competitive fight for existence of unnecessary and chronically unproductive churches. The burden of the support of these non-productive churches, partially subsidized in home mission societies falls upon the rural population, increasing existing financial depression.

One-fifth of all rural churches receive home mission aid," stated Dr. Brunner. "Of these subsidized churches, a large number are in active competition with other subsidized churches."

A considerable proportion of the aided churches are of the chronically non-productive sort. It almost appears in many districts that the fewer churches a county is economically able to afford the more it is apt to have. Subsidized competition is often seen even found between churches of the same denomination, and very frequently between those of almost identical doctrines. Out of 211 aided churches in certain typical counties, it was found that 149 could be dispensed without essential loss. The rising people's movement has failed to take hold also in the rural sections.

The average church provides a program that ignores the yearnings and ardors of youth," says the survey.

"The Roman Catholic and the Jewish communities have more to teach Protestant bodies in this field than in any other."

Charles F. Gilpin, of the United States Department of Agriculture, in a foreword to "The Town and Country Church in the United States" declares that "This courageous survey has reduced the vastness of the rural church problem to some order, and set the religious soul of rural America free from both ecclesiastical provincialism and statistical timidities influence the restoration of lands and to assist in the scientific cutting of our still standing trees.

"We favor a material reduction of the taxes now being imposed by the federal, state, county and local governments."

"We urge budgetary procedure upon all governmental units."

"We urge that Congress shall adopt as a permanent immigration policy admission of applicants limited not by number, but by quality and in accordance with our economic needs. We favor an American merchant marine."

"We favor waterway projects through the Mississippi Valley and other parts of the country as in the interest of farmers and other shippers, particularly the St. Lawrence River and the Lakes to the Gulf proposals."

"We favor further trial of the Transportation Act of 1920 without amendment by the present Congress."

"We oppose government ownership or operation of the railroads, mines, utility, utilities farms or factories."

"We denounce all projects designed to impair property rights."

"We call upon the people to renew their loyalty to our Constitution."

"We oppose every attempt toward depriving the United States Supreme Court of its primary function to determine the validity of congressional action."

If the people join with Congress in making these recommendations effective there will be less opportunity for the spread of the vaguer theories of government and economics by which it has been sought to蒙蔽 the farmers whom it has been erroneously supposed are willing to subscribe to every so-called panacea for theills from which government and the farming industry have been suffering.

FRIENDSHIP.

Friendship is never cheap! This cannot be denied.

No person can afford to be pure gold, it seems! The changing seasons

The public fancy and the fashion's turn; not its lustre. Men and manners, National and cosmopolitan, and banners. Not after but before the fashion's turn, the farm foundation that's forever Progress may wreck the palace guard-ed.

Custodians once tall may be dispossessed. Change in the monarch of opinions. The old pass out of thought's do-minion.

But if friendship is still life a brightest jewel,

PEDDY BEGAN FIGHT ON KLAN EARLY IN MAYFIELD CAMPAIGN

Letter Evaded Statement of His Position on the K. M. K. Issue.

ADMITTED BEING MEMBER

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—George E. S. Peddy, 30-year-old Houston attorney, was a teacher of the Young Men's Sunday School class and assistant county attorney of Harris county before he took up the battle against Senator Harry B. Mayfield.

Peddy first jumped into the fight against the Ku Klux Klan, when he made a speech denouncing Mayfield and became director of the campaign of former Governor James E. Ferguson, who was running for the Democratic nomination against Mayfield.

The Mayfield contest started when the first Democratic primary was held in Texas in July, 1922. There were six candidates—Mayfield, Ferguson, the then Senator Culberson, Sterling P. Strong, Robert L. Henry and Cullen P. Thomas.

In this first primary Mayfield and Ferguson were high men, so they competed against each other, with the rest eliminated, in a run-off primary held in August.

At that time Mayfield received a majority of 50,000.

In the campaigns previous to these two primaries Mayfield's connection with the Klan was frequently mentioned but Mayfield at first took no notice of the issue.

Strong first mentioned the Klan in a speech at Gainesville, Texas, in February, 1922. On April 1, the first of a series of questionnaires were sent to all the candidates demanding to know where they stood regarding the Klan.

Culberson, before receiving the questionnaire, made public a statement denouncing the Klan. Henry, in a speech a week later announced he was a Klansman and that he had the permission of the order to declare himself.

Ferguson and Thomas answered the questionnaire, stating that they were not members of the Klan and in varying degrees were not in sympathy with its principles.

Of all the candidates, Mayfield was the only one who did not answer the question. He said he did not consider Klan membership a proper issue in a race for the senatorship and refused to reveal how he stood on the question.

Mayfield did not give his position until he took the witness stand in an examination at Columbus, when Peddy asked an injunction.

An excerpt from the examination showed the following query:

"Q.—And you are not at that time a member of the Ku Klux Klan?"

"A.—No, sir."

"Q.—Have you attended any meetings since resigning?"

"A.—Yes, sir."

"Q.—Where?"

"A.—In Dallas."

"Q.—Did you address that meeting?"

"A.—I did not."

"Q.—Was your campaign mentioned at that Klan meeting in Dallas?"

"A.—Yes."

"Q.—Does the Klan make a habit of allowing former members who have resigned to attend secret meetings after their resignation?"

"A.—I do not know."

"Q.—Was it a public meeting or a secret meeting?"

"A.—A secret meeting, I believe."

That also came the Democratic state convention. There was a fight over whether a Ku Klux Klan plank should be put into the state platform. Two planks were offered in committee—one reaffirming the declaration of the party for religious liberty and mentioning the Klan, while the other made the same declaration without naming the Klan. Neither plank was reported.

In the meantime, Texas Republicans had nominated E. P. Wilmett as their state convention candidate opposing Mayfield. But Wilmett withdrew on September 6, because of failing health, leaving Mayfield as the only candidate for the senatorship.

Three days later, anti-Klan Democrats, disatisfied with the Mayfield nomination, issued a call for a separate convention and Peddy was nominated. When the Republicans found themselves without a candidate they decided to join with the anti-Klan Democrats, and thus Peddy got the support of coalition, which he carried into the election.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 18, 1924.

Detailed report of the Connellsville coke trade for the week ending Saturday, January 9, shows a total of 16,242 ovens, of which 9,342 are in blast and 11,320 idle, with a total estimated production of 17,230 tons. Carrying out its plan of two preceding years in placing its safety work on a competitive basis among its eighteen plants, the Carnegie Steel Company of Pittsburgh has had designed and cast another bronze safety trophy for the year 1924. As in the competition last year the trophy is to be awarded from month to month, and at the end of the year in perpetuity. The monthly award is based on the greatest percentage of decrease in lost time accidents at any plant as compared with the same month for the preceding five years, and the in perpetuum award is based on the greatest decrease throughout the twelve months compared with the preceding five years.

This basis of award has been found to be more equitable and satisfactory than any other plan, and places all plants, large or small, and with varying numbers of men, on a just basis of competition.

The trophy for 1924 is designed by Giuseppe Moretti, a sculptor who resides in Pittsburgh and who designed the two preceding trophies: Mr. Moretti has become interested in safety through this line of work, is continually studying it from the practical as well as the symbolic viewpoint, and he has declared that the safety work of industry has opened up a new field of art.

This trophy is the third in the Carnegie Steel collection of trophies which this feature of safety is developing, and stands 32 inches high to the top of the rider's banner staff. It is 11 inches wide at the base and on the reverse side bears the words "SAFETY FIRST."

Safety First is a recognized intellectual being as therefore quite young.

His strength though absolutely without limit in its possibilities is still in its youth. Human Labor, the third force is an older, ever existing power in full strength but over young.

With rare truth and clearness of vision, and great beauty of design Mr. Moretti has developed these facts in his 1924 Safety Trophy for the Carnegie Steel Company.

A powerful young horse stands firmly as if held by a strong hand, full of energy and impulsion, ready to do the will of his master. On his neck is no bridle, but with the firm control of a perfect will. The rider carries no weapon for he is a constructive power for life and health. On his banner is 1924. His shield is Safety First. Standing on the pedestal below him at his side is a large strong young workman—a farrago of human power. The three, in a beautiful co-ordination are a group—each giving and receiving strength as in a circle of perfect harmony. Human Power, with his humor, rendering looks up at the banner, and meditates before he begins his work.

One sees in the confident joy of his face and attitude, that he feels the guiding and inspiring power of safety.

He shows his contemplation, co-operation and eager readiness for action when the word shall be given, and being a living, thinking soul, he, unlike the horse, looks up to the source of his inspiration.

Safety First is an intellectual power

introduced into the world since machinery began to be employed to increase production. This intellectual power has always existed in the form of instinctive self preservation.

Under former simple conditions it could be trusted vaguely as an instinct. With the late rapid development of machinery, man becomes confused before vast new forces of infinite power and intricate dangers of science. These forces demand quicker reactions and sterner precautions against danger than man's ancestors required. To awaken this dormant latent, almost unused, instinct of man called self preservation must be organised into an invincible force under the slogan name, SAFETY FIRST.

This basis of award has been found to be more equitable and satisfactory than any other plan, and places all plants, large or small, and with varying numbers of men, on a just basis of competition.

With the late rapid development of machinery, man becomes confused before vast new forces of infinite power and intricate dangers of science. These forces demand quicker reactions and sterner precautions against danger than man's ancestors required. To awaken this dormant latent, almost unused, instinct of man called self preservation must be organised into an invincible force under the slogan name, SAFETY FIRST.

This basis of award has been found to be more equitable and satisfactory than any other plan, and places all plants, large or small, and with varying numbers of men, on a just basis of competition.

The trophy for 1924 is designed by Giuseppe Moretti, a sculptor who resides in Pittsburgh and who designed the two preceding trophies: Mr. Moretti has become interested in safety through this line of work, is continually studying it from the practical as well as the symbolic viewpoint, and he has declared that the safety work of industry has opened up a new field of art.

This trophy is the third in the Carnegie Steel collection of trophies which this feature of safety is developing, and stands 32 inches high to the top of the rider's banner staff. It is 11 inches wide at the base and on the reverse side bears the words "SAFETY FIRST."

Safety First is a recognized intellectual being as therefore quite young.

His strength though absolutely without limit in its possibilities is still in its youth. Human Labor, the third force is an older, ever existing power in full strength but over young.

With rare truth and clearness of vision, and great beauty of design Mr. Moretti has developed these facts in his 1924 Safety Trophy for the Carnegie Steel Company.

A powerful young horse stands firmly as if held by a strong hand, full of energy and impulsion, ready to do the will of his master. On his neck is no bridle, but with the firm control of a perfect will. The rider carries no weapon for he is a constructive power for life and health. On his banner is 1924. His shield is Safety First.

Standing on the pedestal below him at his side is a large strong young workman—a farrago of human power. The three, in a beautiful co-ordination are a group—each giving and receiving strength as in a circle of perfect harmony. Human Power, with his humor, rendering looks up at the banner, and meditates before he begins his work.

One sees in the confident joy of his face and attitude, that he feels the guiding and inspiring power of safety.

He shows his contemplation, co-operation and eager readiness for action when the word shall be given, and being a living, thinking soul, he, unlike the horse, looks up to the source of his inspiration.

Safety First is an intellectual power

introduced into the world since machinery began to be employed to increase production. This intellectual power has always existed in the form of instinctive self preservation.

Under former simple conditions it could be trusted vaguely as an instinct. The Edible Potato.

One Mother Says:

Where children come home from school for a noontide lunch, the over-hand baked potato should be frequently used. It is but a matter of a minute or two to brush the large potatoes and pop them into the oven an hour before time for the children to come home. If the potato is rubbed with hard fat will bake with tender skin which should also be eaten. Served with bacon, fat, one large potato, with a dish of fruit, a lettuce sandwich, a cookie and a glass of milk makes the child's lunch complete.

WILLIAMS SAYS CLOSING OF HIS DANCES IS UNJUST

Yra C. Williams, head of the Williams Dancing Academy, whose name was revoked this week by Mayor Mitchell, issued the following statement to the press:

"As I feel a great injustice has been done to me by revoking my license in Connellsville, I wish to state to the general public, as my large patronage knows without commenting, I have stood for good clean dancing and have always advocated same in the past two years I have been holding my classes and dances in Connellsville. I am a member of the Pittsburgh Society for the Improvement of Dancing, also a member of the American National Association of Professional Dancers, the largest professional dancing society in America."

"I have had my dancing school in Uniontown for 17 years and have the entire city, and community for evidence, that I have always conducted a clean and moral dance to a large percentage. Hoping again to reopen my school in Connellsville in the near future, I hope the citizens of Connellsville will form their own organization."

On Our Appallin' Ignorance

GITTIN' IN ON TH' GROUND FLOOR

Art Purviance, a newly elected member of th' school board, said today in his first address t' th' school pupils, that there's about thirty-five million voters in this country that cast their ballots without knowin' what they're votin' for, an' at least eighteen million active political workers that don't know t' difference between th' Monroe Doctrine an' Ad Valorem. An' then he went on to say:

"Th' plague of America today is ignorance. Ignorance is taking more lives today than white-mule an' th' white plague combined. Ignorance is dominatin' crooks t' offices, while swindlers taken almost t' th' business point on ignorance. Indifference an' ignorance are old cronies. Nobody kin be enlightened 'an' indifferent. Tho's probably thirty-two or three million people in this country that think they kin git somethin' fer nothin'. How many people know that if a mile or an oil well, or an industrial proposition was as tilted as they are told it is, that they'd have a chance t' git in on it. Very few, how many people know enough t' keep out of bath tubs immediately after a hearty dinner? Comparative few. How many people know that lettuce an' milk won't libel? An alarmin' small number. An average o' th'ree thousand an' twenty some people take refuge under trees durin' thunder storms, annually. It is estimated, an' I have no reason t' question th' figures, that twenty-two million people walk on th' downtown streets over summer. I see th' same old circus parade, expectin' t' see a solid mile o' glitterin' golden, oriental paganism sprawlin' th' Durbar o' India. Every year hundreds o' ignorant people git up an' move about in narrow, treacherous canoes. Th' front page o' ever newspaper is a strikin' proof o' our illiteracy. Tho's a Volstead Act on our statute book, an'

how many people seem t' know it? Thor's unwritten laws that even horses, an' skunks, an' all th' lower animals, an' even fishes, respect that man seems t' know nothin' o' 'He didn't know' or 'She didn't know' or 'They didn't know'. What an awful indictment in a land full o' schools an' newspapers an' bill boards. Every day people are killed an' maimed an' poisoned an' blinded 'cause they didn't know. Every day people are ridiculous driven, t' cover 'cause they didn't know, an' ever day some candidate for office git by with flyin' colors 'cause th' people didn't know. Th' tariff, cheaper coal, th' League o' Nations, freight rates, th' cost o' livin' don't amount t' nothin'. Th' great overshadowin' paramount need in this country is th' raisin' o' th' level o' intelligence, an' then everything else 'll come easy."

BY-PRODUCT OUTPUT TOTAL LARGER BUT AVERAGE WAS LESS

Former Wts. 2,920,000 Tons in December Against 2,842,
900 in November.

5,986,000 TONS COAL USED

The monthly report of the United States Geological Survey shows that the daily rate of output of by-product coke declined slightly during the last month of 1923. While the total output of by-product coke was somewhat greater than in November—2,920,000 tons against 2,842,900—the output per day decreased from 98,065 tons to 96,740 tons, a decline of 1.3 per cent. The percentage of production to capacity declined from 81.1 per cent. There was no change in the number of plants active; out of 70 by-product installations now in existence, 66 were in operation and five were idle.

The total production of the beehive ovens in December was 1,063,000 tons, a decrease of 40,000 tons, compared with November. The output in December, however, was reduced by the Christmas holiday and by the occurrence of five Sundays in one month, and the rate of production per working day underwent no change.

Including screenings and breeze the monthly average production of coke during 1917-1923, both years inclusive, and the last three months of 1923 was as follows:

By-Product	Beehive
1917	1,870,000
1918	2,100,000
1919	2,540,000
1920	1,618,000
1921	2,100,000
1922	1,748,000
1923	1,402,000
October, 1923	2,374,000
November, 1923	2,000,000
December, 1923	1,063,000

In spite of this gradual decline in the output of coke, the ovens continue to require very large quantities of coal. To manufacture the coke produced in December required the charging of 5,986,000 tons of coal, of which 4,310,000 tons were used by the by-product ovens alone. This fact offers one answer to the question: "What is beginning of the continued heavy production of bituminous coal?"

Assuming a yield of one-half ton of coke to 60.5 per cent of the coal charged in by-product ovens, and 65.4 per cent in beehive ovens, the monthly average consumption of coal during the periods named was as follows:

By-Product	Beehive
1917	2,620,000
1918	4,014,000
1919	3,095,000
1920	2,842,900
1921	3,684,000
1922	2,345,000
October, 1923	2,101,000
November, 1923	700,000
December, 1923	1,066,000

Assuming a yield of one-half ton of coke to 60.5 per cent of the coal charged in by-product ovens, and 65.4 per cent in beehive ovens, the monthly average consumption of coal during the periods named was as follows:

Wide collars—collars of white satin or batiste trimmed with lace and embroidery, are very effective on black velvet gowns.

"DEVIL MOUNTAIN" ANTHRACITE MINES BURNING 40 YEARS

At the edge of the city of Wilkes-Barre, within sight of the central business section, is a territory of several square miles that looks worse than the devastated regions of France and the Japanese earthquake area of Japan, nay, the United States.

A mine fire, starting deep down in the earth forty years ago, is now burning just under the surface over the entire west side of Georgetown mountain, scorching and destroying every growing thing and giving off gases that has driven every living thing from the vicinity.

Alone caves that look like copper shell holes, burned trees and scalded vegetation, giant rocks bursting into a million pieces from the terrific heat and the low-lying cloud of sulphur and coal smoke seeping from every rock and crevice, make the mountain side look as if Satan were trying to move Hell on the surface of the earth.

It is estimated that the loss from this fire has been more than $10,000,000 and eight lives and it is only one of nineteen such fires now blazing underground in the anthracite region. Some of these coal fires have been burning for ninety years.

At a recent meeting of mining engineers here, Joseph J. Walsh, chief of the State Department of Mines, estimated that these fires collectively cost the operators $10,000,000 each year, and no practical way has ever been discovered to control them.

The fire on Georgetown mountain—locally it's called the "Red Ash" fire—is one of the worst in the region because it is close to other valuable coal lands and to several communities. Several years ago four persons were found dead in a house near the fire, asphyxiated by the deadly gases while they slept. Later a tramp, who tried to sleep on the mountain because it was warm, was found dead near a "gas pocket," and the workmen have lost their lives trying to control the blaze.

"Millions" of tons of the best quality anthracite coal have been consumed by the flames since the fire started. To the east a force of men continually play a hose on the ground to prevent spread of the fire to the workings of the Hudson Coal Company, and on the south the French and Wilkes-Barre Coal Company engineers are building huge concrete nests to keep the flames from their mines.

Various attempts to conquer the fire have failed. Concrete, cut-a-way, chumpon and every known method of fighting fire has been employed by engineers without success. It still burns, spreading its ruin and desolation over the valley and causing the foreign miners labor to steadily avoid what they now call "Devil's Mountain."

"Anybody," said the sheriff, "I didn't want to have the blamed shank on my mind while we're organizing the company. It's bad enough havin' to go out and fight Indians without wearin' all the time. I'm awfully afraid whether anybody back here has had sense enough to keep Martin from starvin' to death. I guess we'd better money him up to the drill ground, boys. Martin's got into the bushes by this time, and if I'm any kind of a guesseer he ain't dawdlin' about smilin' every spring now as he comes across."

"Don't you think you'd better go over and take a look around the jail first?"

"What for? There ain't anybody in it."

"No, but like as not the dog-gasted welp run off with that padlock, an we'll ought to know it before he gets too big a start. Padlocks cost money," explained the other, with a dry chuckle and a dig in the sheriff's ribs.

"So do prisoners," was the rejoinder of this remarkable sheriff.

And thus it came to pass that between the sheriff and Kenneth Gwynne and Moll Hawk, the county got rid of three iniquitous individuals. One rode forth in broad daylight on a matchless thoroughbred; another stole off like a weasel in the night, and the third took passage on the ship that never returns.

CHAPTER XXII

The Trial of Moll Hawk. The trial of Moll Hawk was a brief one. The foreman of the jury asked permission of the court to make a few remarks before the taking of testimony began.

"Your honor, this here jury got together last night and sort of talked things over while Mr. Benbridge and other patriotic citizens of Lafayette were engaged in organizing a number of noble and brave-hearted gentlemen into a company of soldiers to give battle to the Mothblooded red man who is about to sweep down upon us, with tomahawks and knife and rifle."

"We will ravage our lands and plague our women—I mean pillage our lands and women—so forth. As I was saying, your honor, we talked it over and decided as how we have all enlisted in Mr. Benbridge's troupe and be sort of thought we'd better begin drivin' as soon as possible, and also seeing as how this here trial is attractin' a good deal of attention at a time when we ought to be thinkin' of the safety of our wives and children—if we have any—we came to the conclusion to address you, sir, with all respect, and suggest that you instruct the counsel on both sides to be as lenient as possible with the jury."

"This here innocent girl's father broke out of jail and got away. As far as this here jury knows he ain't likely ever to come back so, for the time being at least, there don't seem to be anybody we can hang for the crime with which the prisoner at the bar is charged. This jury was picked with a great deal of care by the sheriff and is—I am reliably informed—entirely satisfactory to both sides of the case."

In view of the fact that Black Hawk's warriors are reported to have been seen within twenty miles of our beautiful little city, and also in view of the additional fact that Mrs. Rachel Gwynne, one of our foremost citizens and taxpayers, has recently informed me—and your honor also, I believe, in my presence—that she intends to give this poor girl a home as soon as she is lawfully discharged by the jury as not guilty, we, the jury, implore your honor to keep an eye on the clock. As we understand the case, there were only two witnesses to the killing of the villain against whom this young woman fought so desperately in self-defense. One of 'em is here in this courtroom. The other is dead and buried. It is more than unlikely pastime. We, the jury, would like for you to inform the counsel on both sides that at precisely ten o'clock we are going to render a verdict because at a quarter past ten the majority of us have to attend a company drill. The lawyer for the prisoner enlisted himself as a private in our company, and so did the prosecuting attorney."

"This is a most unusual and unprecedented action on the part of a jury," said the court, gravely. "However, in view of the extraordinary circumstances, I feel that we should be as lenient as possible in disposing of this case on trial. Gentlemen, you have heard the remarks of the foreman of the jury. Have either of you any reason for objecting to the suggestion he has made? Very well, then, we will proceed with the trial of Mary Hawk, charged with murder in the first degree. Call your first witness, Mr. Prosecutor."

The little courtroom was jammed to its capacity. Hundreds, unable to gain admission, crowded about the entrance and filled the square. The town was in the throes of a vast excitement, what with the trial, the Indian springing to the north, the escape of Martin Hawk and the flight of Barry Lapelle, hitherto regarded as a rake but not even suspected of actual dishonesty. The Paul Revere, with Captain Reddy in charge, had got away at daybreak, leashed to the rails with foot-long individuals who suddenly had decided to try their fortunes elsewhere. Better than remain in a district likely to be overrun by savages."

Moll Hawk sat in front of the

Mrs. Gwynne and Viola occupied seats on a bench near one of the windows, facing the jury. The prisoner was frightened. Her deepest eyes darted restlessly, even warily, about her as she sat there in the midst of this throng of strange, step-faced men.

The prosecuting attorney, a young man of slender experience but chivalrous instincts, called the undertaker to the stand.

"As few words as possible tell the jury who it was that you buried yesterday afternoon."

"Jasper Suggs."

"Was he dead?"

"He was."

"That's all, your honor."

"Any questions, Mr. Gwynne?" inquired the judge.

"None, your honor."

"Call your next witness, Mr. Prosecutor."

"Mr. Sheriff, will you take the stand for a moment? Did you see the defendant along about four o'clock yesterday morning?"

"I did."

"State where."

"At her father's cabin."

"State what had happened there prior to your arrival, if you know."

"This defendant had had a little difficulty with the corpse, and he was dead on the floor when we got there."

"From a knife wound?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who inflicted that wound, if you know?"

"Miss Mary Hawk."

"You are sure about that, Mr. Sheriff?"

"Positively."

"How can you be sure of that, sir, if you did not witness the deed with your own eyes?"

The Court rapped on the table.

"This is your own witness, Mr. Prosecutor. Are you trying to cross-examine him, or to discredit his testimony?" "I beg your honor's pardon."

Kenneth arose. "We will admit that Jasper Suggs came to his death at the hands of the defendant."

"We will ravage our lands and plague our women—I mean pillage our lands and women—so forth. As I was saying, your honor, we talked it over and decided as how we have all enlisted in Mr. Benbridge's troupe and be sort of thought we'd better begin drivin' as soon as possible, and also seeing as how this here trial is attractin' a good deal of attention at a time when we ought to be thinkin' of the safety of our wives and children—if we have any—we came to the conclusion to address you, sir, with all respect, and suggest that you instruct the counsel on both sides to be as lenient as possible with the jury."

"No, your honor. The state does not desire to present argument. It is content to submit its case to the jury without argument, asking only that a verdict be rendered fairly and squarely upon the evidence as introduced. All we ask is justice."

"Any argument, Mr. Gwynne?"

"None, your honor. The defense is satisfied to leave its case entirely in the hands of the jury."

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the court, glancing at the clock, "the court will omit its instructions to you, merely advising you that if you find the prisoner guilty as charged your verdict must be murder in the first degree, the penalty for which is death."

The foreman leaned over and picked up his hat from the floor. Then he arose and announced:

"We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty."

"Prisoner discharged," said the court, arising. "The court desires to thank the jurors for the close attention you have paid to the evidence in this case and for the prompt and just verdict you have returned. Court is adjourned."

Later on Moll Hawk walked up the

HELP FOR THE MAN WHO WANTS TO BUILD

GOOD HARDWARE IMPORTANT ITEM FOR YOUR HOME

The second of two articles to appear in this column by the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States on "Selecting and Setting the Hard-ware for Your Home."

What equipment should you have in the way of hardware for your home? There should be fastenings at all doors and windows, and cam-ment adjusters for windows of that type, just as the doors will have to hang freely, as they more probably known, butts. Of course you will have a cylinder lock at the front door. Now, as a matter of fact, you need a good lock here at the back door than at the front. It will be a great convenience and a real protection to have such a lock on the back door. If you can order your hardware in advance, the cam-ment will fit right, and front door lock fits so that they can be operated by the same key.

Fix out the hardware for the front door, and elsewhere for that matter, that harmonizes in design with your home. Do not be carried away by a set of hardware that is attractive for itself alone. It is the right combination that counts. Get the hardware to fit the hardware on the various doors, drawers, and windows where it will harmonize with the design of these things. We must realize that this must be done without cutting into the tenons that hold the parts of the doors together. It takes a real workman to do a good job of hardware.

From the front door and perhaps for the communicating doors on the first floor, it will be desirable to have the hinges or butts of the back bearing type. For closet and bedroom doors and other doors which will have light usage, the ordinary friction butts will serve very well. It is very important to have three butts on the communicating door. The doors will look especially well on a corner lot, and the large enclosed porch is a very desirable feature.

The house is especially designed for a 60 foot lot, but if turned with the narrow end to the street can be accommodated on a 40 foot lot. The house will look especially well on a corner lot, and the large enclosed porch is a very desirable feature.

Study of the floor plans shows many features. The living room occupies one entire end. The dining room and kitchen share the other half of the first floor. The kitchen is made comfortable with an unbroken breakfast nook. The dining room has cross ventilation and light.

In the front hall there is a large coat closet, and besides the stairs, a convenient niche for the telephone and heat outlet.

Two good-sized bedrooms occupy the second floor, both with ventilation from two sides. The sleeping porch can take the single beds.

There is a room for an attic, and the plans call for a basement with a large light laundry and storage room, as desired.

The cost to build this house, including heating, plumbing, lighting, painting, ready to live in, but not including wall decorations, should range between $8,000 and $10,000. In certain localities where costs are high, the highest figure quoted would be too low. In other localities, the lowest figure quoted would be more than sufficient. The range of $8,000 is given to cover differences in the way the house is built, how thoroughly it is equipped and completed, and in what district it is erected.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The plans for small houses are furnished by the Regional Bureaus of the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, an organization made up of the representative offices of the American Institute of Architects, the National Association of Building Officials, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, all under the direction of the U.S. government. It is practically a non-profit-making public service, and has as its purpose the furnishing of complete plans for small houses at reasonable cost. For information regarding the blue prints and specifications, the cost of the house, building rates, etc., inquire of the nearest office of the Architects' Small House Service Bureau. WHAT YOU MAY WANT TO KNOW ABOUT BUILDING

Questions addressed to the Bureau will be answered by the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc., controlled by the American Institute of Architects, located in the Department of Commerce, United States government. Enclose addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Q. I understand that pine need for flooring has to be quarter sawed. Is it necessary to use the grade as is known for linoleum floors?

A. No. Flat sawn stock will serve the purpose.

Q. What is the best way to stain maple floors?

A. One of the best ways is to varnish them. Put on two coats of the best varnish you can buy. Do not let anybody put on shellac.

Q. When is the proper time to put finish floors in a new house?

A. Not until after absolutely all the other work has been done including the painting and that the house is absolutely dry.

Q. In digging a cesspool for our house we ran into quicksand at a level of 12 feet. Our plans call for a pool to be 20 feet deep. The contractor says he cannot take this quicksand out. Will it be all right to stop at this level?

A. It is not necessary to carry the excavation below the level of the quicksand.

Q. A clause in the deed to our property states that the grade line of the house must not be more than two feet above the present curb. This will make it necessary for us to cut off about four feet of embankment and set our house down into a hole. Is it necessary for us to carry out this provision of the deed?

A. If you will read your deed over you probably will find a forfeiture provision whereby you will be liable to pay damages to your property unless you carry through the provisions. If there is a "non-performance" provision, you will only be liable in a civil suit and damages will have to be proved. A safe way out of this difficulty is to follow the provisions of the deed. Your neighbor will undoubtedly want to cut their lots down over with yours and all will be on the same level.

Q. We want to build a five or six room house at a cost of not more than $4,000, including the lot. What kind of a house can we get for this sum?

A. If you put much of your own labor into the amount of money you will have to spend, you will be able to get a house of six rooms and lot is less probably than most anything we can think of. If you will get along without a basement or laundry, without any main plumbing there is less room for the house. The cost of the house will depend upon the location and the kind of fittings and materials, you may be able to get your price.

word that the militia of his country was preparing to start off at once to meet the advancing horde; he brought to the report that farther north the frontier was being abandoned by the settlers, and that massacres already had occurred. There was also well-supported rumor that a portion of the Illinois militia, some two hundred and fifty men in all, had been routed on Hickory creek by Black Hawk's incitable warriors, with appalling losses to the whites. He bore a stirring message from his commanding officer, urging the men of Tippecanoe to reassemble and join John Brown's troops in an immediate movement to repel or at least to check the Sac and Miami and Potowatamies who were swarming over the prairies like locusts.

The appearance of this messenger, worn and spent after his long ride, created a profound sensation. However, at last was official verification of the stories brought in by the panic-stricken refugees. They were something to be proud of to the fact that a real militia existed, and that it was not, after all, another of those partial-trained "races" which were constantly cropping up.

For months there had been talk of Black Hawk and his Sac going on the warpath over the occupation of their lands in northern Illinois by the swift-advancing, ruthless whites. The old Sac, or "Sauk" chief, had long threatened to repel by force of arms this violation of the treaty. He had been so long, however, in even making a start to carry out his threat that the more enlightened pioneers had ceased to take any stock in his prophecies.

The Free Press, Lafayette's only newspaper, had from time to time printed news seeping out of the Northwest by means of carrier or vagabond; their tales bore out the reports furnished by federal and state authorities on the more or less unsettled conditions.

There was, for example, the extremely disgusting story that Black Hawk, on his return from a hunting trip west of the Mississippi, had travelled far northwest across northern Indiana to seek the advice of the British commander in Canada. Not only was this pilgrimage true, but the fact was afterward definitely established that the British chief advised the chief to make war on the white settlers—this being late in 1832, nearly twenty years after the close of the War of 1812. Many of Black Hawk's warriors had served under Tecumseh in the last war with England, and they still were rabid British sympathizers. Amidst the greatest enthusiasm and excitement, the men of Lafayette organized the "Guard," a company some three hundred strong. After several days of intense and, for a time, ludicrous "drilling," they were ready and eager to ride out into the far-flung Northwest.

Cokers Win Another League Clash, Defeating Norwin Hi At That Place; Score 29-20

Victory Gives Locals Undisputed Lead in W. P. I. A. League; Are Unbeaten.

JEANNETTE HI TUESDAY

Triumphing over Norwin High, considered the most difficult team in the W. P. I. A. League, Connellsville High's wonder boys returned home last night in a rightfully happy mood, but the ardor of their spirits was dampened by the loss of their clever captain, Ray Welsh, who sprained an ankle in the second quarter. The cotton-topped chap had been playing his usual bang-up game and his removal was undoubtedly a blow to the team. Inactivity will chase the lad but he will carefully nurse the injured spot in order to make possible an early return to the game where he shined his best.

At the end of the half-way mark the score was 18-7 for Connellsville and with that good margin established there was no heading the team. In the last two quarters Norwin was able to reduce the lead only two points.

It was a wonderful game to watch, with both outfits straining themselves to the limit.

Captain Takes Over Dickerson Run "Y" Five in Easy Game

Playing the Dickerson Run Y. M. C. A. quintet at the gymnasium in South Connellsville last night, the Captain Glass basketball team won by the overwhelming score of 87-8. The visitors were hardly in the game. Captain made a record, it is believed, by scoring 39 field goals from the floor.

It was up to the Captain players to make the clash interesting and as they did, their brilliant form being a source of pleasure to the crowd. Toomey got into the game in the second half only and scored 10 field goals.

The line-up:

Dunbar Township Is Too Much for South Union Hi Basketeteers

The Dunbar Township High School, playing at Lohrsville, last night defeated the South Union High team in Group Three of the County League. The score was 47-7. The Dunbar girls lost in the preliminary, however, by a score of 26-20. It was the best defeat this year for the Dunbar Township lassies.

The line-up:

son, with Redskins, the locals also lost. Aside from those two games the "kids" have turned every other one in.

Sport Notes

Harvard will have six of its football regularly back for the 1924 season.

Henry Brok Blockman of Waltham, Mass., has been elected captain of Dartmouth's 1924 football team.

Mr. Fippe is speaking boldly concerning Mr. Dempsey. Mr. Fippe, you see, is in South America.

Walter T. Patterson of Wilmette, Ill., has been elected captain of the Harvard Soccer team.

The difficulty is not in picking the best football team of the year but in getting somebody to agree with you.

Jack Dempsey has invested his money in improved property against the day when Jack Kearns' right hand has lost its cunning.

Coach Fielding H. Yost asserts that he has no information regarding any negotiations for a football game in 1924 between Michigan and the Navy.

The Rochester Internationals in W. C. Comstock, obtained from Waco of the Texas association, believe they have made almost as fast as Maurice Archdeacon.

Cincinnati fans may well wonder at what stage of next year's race Eddie Rousch will join the team. Pat Moran showed last year that he is still worth having about as manager.

A swimming instructor says that learning to swim is easy if the pupil will grasp the idea that swimming is but an adaptation of walking and that anyone who can walk can swim.

Young Shinnag, nineteen years old, light-heavyweight of Marion, Ga., has engaged in more than eighty bouts, losing only three decisions. Twice he reversed these decisions in return bouts.

Officials of the Pittsburgh National League baseball club announce the purchase outright of two pitchers, Emil Yde of Oklahoma City and Herbert May of Omaha, both of the Western League.

France is building high hopes upon winning the soccer championship at the Olympic games. The United States will enter this competition for the first time next year. It will be run on the lone-and-out plan.

Less than 16 major league baseball teams seem to have struck their winter stride.

Bill Donovan was more than a great baseball player. He showed us what a smile can do.

Fippe is doing a lot of talking, aware, perhaps, that one word needs to another and $200,000.

Captain McMullan is the only regular lost to University of Illinois football team from the 1924 squad.

Swimming is the leading sport of the Hawaiian Islands, followed by tennis, golf, football, basketball, volleyball and baseball.

Coach West of Michigan has apparently captured the early bird prize by asking for 20,000 tickets to next November's football game at Columbus, O.

Joe Cantillon, who is planning to start a school for pitchers, should add a course for umpires who often seem to know less about the game than anybody else in baseball.

When Dave Buncroft takes over the management of the Braves next spring it will be the first time in several years that either of the Boston major league clubs has had a playing manager.

Sitting on the bench and managing a ball club—and spending the winter in the open—have done wonders in a way for Art Fletcher. The fans of Philadelphia hardly will recognize the manager of the Phils when they see him in the spring. He's developed into a ruddy-faced, square-jawed.

Confluence will give the locals some opposition and make the clash interesting, but it is not felt the visitors will win. If the opportunity presents itself Coach Settle will likely use quite a few of his substitutes tonight.

Of Interest to Fans:
 In the county league last night Fairchance won over Smithfield, 24-22; South Brownsville defeated North Union Township, 47-8; and Redstone township defeated German Township, 55-19.

Defeating Norwin High last night placed Connellsville in the undisputed lead of Section Three, W. P. I. A. League. The Cokers have taken four straight games on this schedule, and three of these victories have been won on foreign floors. The next league game will be on Tuesday evening when Jeannette High will be here. It will be the only league contest next week.

Harry Greb, in a 15-round match with Johnny Wilson last night, easily defended his middleweight title. He carried the fight throughout and in the early stages was effective at long range fighting. At times both men had to be cautioned by the referee for holding and slapping.
